BRITISH SERVING PEOPLE.

RETAINERS OF THE NOBILITY AND THEIR PECULIARITIES.

Lord Salisbury's Beliefs at Hatfield and in Town - A Two-Faced Tip Top
Droop - Low Vantage for Social Men.

The best domestic servants in the world are undoubtedly to be found in England. No where else can one find so trustworthy, so willing service to be had. The servants of the aristocracy in the middle ages were a class apart, and they have remained so ever since. Today's servant in Great Britain considers himself of a lower order of mankind than his master, and brings up his child in the same belief. The result is a class of men, perhaps a drunken, "fettish," and poverty-stricken gang, graced by neither high position, nor high education, but by a low, sordid, and squalid life. The servant who is as likely as not to be an intelligent, honest, and temperate man, is treated as a brute, and is kept in a state of ignorance and superstition. The body of a woman, named Mary, was found in the street, near the White Chapel, yesterday. The body was found in a state of decomposition, and was covered with wounds. The Duty on Cars.
The Ottawa correspondent of the Empire telegraphs: "The attention of the Minister of Customs was called last evening to the dispatch from Washington, which states that the Treasury Department will forthwith issue an order for the collection of a duty on cars coming from Canada, which will be the same as that on cars coming from the United States. Mr. Borell expressed the opinion that the dispatch was incorrect. If such policy were adopted, he said, it would be a disaster to the Canadian passenger traffic, a change of cars on the frontier in both directions, and a great loss to the Canadian passenger traffic."
